Christmas, 2009

Dear Friends,

I send you greetings from a snowy Lynchburg, Virginia. I am so happy to be with family this Christmas. Being together makes me remember why I love this time of year so much.

Christmas is the perfect time to remember those who touch our lives with kindness all year long. It is not just at Christmas that we think of the special people in our lives and what they mean. But somehow at Christmas, those thoughts are a little warmer, a little more special, a little closer to the heart....especially thoughts of you.

God has blessed me with you – good friends, supporting churches and individuals who have demonstrated their love for God’s world and His special servants. I am thankful you have touched God’s heart with your prayers, and He has answered and touched the hearts of those whom we serve. You have cared...and missionaries have been encouraged.

In her book Jesus Calling, Sarah Young writes these thoughts of what Jesus might say about His Incarnation: “As you ponder the majestic mystery of the Incarnation, relax in My everlasting arms. Instead of trying to comprehend My Incarnation intellectually, learn from the example of the wise men. They followed the leading of a star, then fell down in humble worship when they found Me. Praise and worship are the best responses to the wonder of My Being.”

And they are still the best responses. That is why we go – so that all the nations might know Him! Thank you for making it possible for me to serve those who care for the world so that others around the world can know, praise, and worship Him with us.

Wishing you all a very Merry Christmas and a blessed New Year.

Dorcas
